

Mr. Nelson recently shared an article with me titled "Finding a Way Forward" written by the Head of School at Grace Community School in Texas. In his article, the author reflects on his school's response to our current challenge which he refers to as "Coronaland."

Here are a couple of his thoughts that grabbed my attention:

- 1) The changes we have been forced to adopt as a result of our current crisis are huge and in the absence of this necessity, would have taken years and considerable resources to undertake or realize. Necessity truly is the mother of invention.
- 2) While we rightfully should grieve and reflect on what we've lost or how things have changed, we also must be prepared to "rewrite our current playbook." Life has changed in many ways but God's truth and plan is moving on just as he has planned.

As a school and community we have responded in amazing ways to unprecedented challenges and we should be encouraged and proud of what we have accomplished. We have displayed compassion, creativity, ingenuity, we have steered our resolve and in this process we have grown closer to each other and to our Lord
